

Q. A body is moved along a closed loop. Is the work done in moving the body necessarily zero? If not, state the condition under which work done over a closed path is always zero.

Ans. No, work done in moving along a closed loop is not necessarily zero. It is zero only when all the forces are conservative forces.